

What are values ?

Jess Walsh

What are values ?

Values are the things against which you make your own choices, whether they are good or bad choices in life.

Your values can help you find the role you want to take in life whether it be a nurse or teacher.

Values are also very important in your life they are the things you that people believe are important in the ways in which they live and work.

Values of a teacher

Some of the values teachers need are they need to be good with children are they need to be knowledgeable about the subjects they are teaching, teachers must have the ability to communicate with the child inspire trust and confidence and motivate students to get the best out of them.

Teachers need to understand the students' educational and emotional needs.

Values of a nurse

The values you need to be a nurse is you need to have good people skills because they will be helping to care for the sick or helping people who need a little bit more support.

Good communication and observation are important to good nursing. Nurses need to be good at listening as well as talking, they have to be constantly alert to changes in patients' condition.